Culinary Medicine as the Prescription

Culinary medicine is a new evidence-based field in medicine that blends the art of food and cooking with the science of medicine. Culinary medicine is concerned with the patient in their immediate need, who asks, 'What do I eat for my condition?' Culinary medicine aims to improve a patients' condition(s) via education, by addressing what they eat and drink regularly. It emphasizes culinary techniques and how to efficiently and confidently prepare health-promoting foods that taste great. Here is your chance to learn about culinary medicine from a Chef and a Doc – Join Cleveland Clinic specialists Dr. Michael F. Roizen and Chef Jim Perko, CEC, AAC as they present this life changing event that will show you how to love the foods that will love YOU back!
